六、閱讀測驗

As a college student, you are expected to attend class and speak up when the instructor asks a question. This is true for questions about the course material and for questions about your opinions and personal experience. Most instructors encourage their students to speak up and share their opinions, even when they disagree with something. Class participation is significant! When a college professor asks a question, he or she expects an answer almost immediately. If there is no response in three or four seconds, the professor thinks the students do not know the answer.

In addition, a professor sometimes asks the students to do group discussions. He or she gives the students instructions, or rules to help control the behavior of the group, yet discussions often seem unorganized because two or three people speak at the same time, they interrupt each other, and sometimes they appear impolite. This is OK (except of the impoliteness); it is a natural part of classroom discussions. It would be nice if everyone in the group let one person speak and listened politely until that person finished, but that rarely happens in a typical class.

46. What is the main point of this passage?

- ① Understanding professors' questions is important.
② Behaving oneself is important.
③ Participation in class is important.
④ Being polite in college is important.

47. How long does a professor usually wait for the student's answer?

- ① Less than 10 seconds.
② Between 30 to 60 seconds.
③ About two minutes.
④ Long enough for the student to come up with good answers.

48. What is Not a professor's expectation of his or her students?

- ① Attending class.
② Being polite in group discussions.
③ Sharing personal experience.
④ Expressing agreements with everything

49. In group discussions, what behavior do professors consider acceptable?

- ① Interruption
② Quietness
③ Rudeness
④ Talking on the cell phone

50. Which following statement about college students is true?

- ① They are free to skip classes.
② They are usually punished for talking in class.
③ Their professors get angry if the students do not know the answers.
④ Their professors encourage them to express their opinions.
